ing light on the fast-hurrying warevents of Europe: "For the third time in the last five years the two great groups of European powers, the Triple Alliance and the Triple Entente, stand face to face with the obvious possibility that war may result from the clash of rival purposes. Today Russia, France and Great Britain are in one camp, Germany, Austria and Italy in the other, and between the two lies the old question of European balance of power.

With the victories of Lule Burgas, Kumanovo and Jenidje-Vardar, Turkish power in Europe collapsed and the small Balkan states, increased by great territorial gain, stood on Austria's southern frontier barring her road to the Aegean, and in the case of Servia threatening to play the rele on the Danube that Sardinia had played on the Po and unite the southern Slavs as Sardinia united Italy.

"To prevent this Austria resorted to desperate tactics. Like Germany, she had expected Turkish victory, and the Osmanli ruin found her unprepared. Toward Servia she adopted bullying tactics. To break up the Balkan alliance, which was in fact a Russian creation and an adjunct of the Triple Entente, she promoted the dissension among the Balkan allies which resulted in the second war.
